Theatre

THEATRE/ October, 2007 OPERAS PRIMAS presents DOS CIRUJAS ("Two Tramps")

The play, cast by Romina Ricci and Azul Lombardía, was written and directed by Daniel Guebel. The proposal is presented as part of the series operas primas, of the cultural center led by José Miguel Onaindía, and was selected by Matías Umpierrez, responsible of the theatre area. The series includes productions by new directors and it aims to give an space for the building of a personal view.

Toto and Loro. Yes and No. Two fellows on the verge of extinction, two liquified entities, without any traits of gender, pierced through, or rather abducted by language, debating about nothingness, and about the making and destruction of Universe. Constant features are hunger, cold and sex. The scene is an ellipsis, and they are the planets that go round a black space, numbed with the cold figures that play with their identities, and that can only annihilate their destinies by denying eternity.
